REPLY TO ELI NICHOLS.

In the communication of Eli Nichols in the last Bugle, may be recognized some truth, more plausibility, and several logical deductions from assumed, and very questionable premises. The latter are tantamount to a repetition of his assertion that "God made the races." He begs the question, he professes to argue; hence has nothing to do but record his conclusions. It is probable he has formed, or confirmed his opinions, by reading Agasis and writers of his stamp; but not one of that class of philosophers, more than the rest of us, was present at the creation of any of his assumed rapes of philosophers, more than the rest of us, was present at the creation of any of his assumed rapes of the party and proceeded to the residence of Mr. Graves, that he had been so foully imposed upon by the rascal Van Toyl, and imposed upon the class to purchase a negro I knew to be free. This would be true were it not that human animals my large family.
